

Table with 5 columns and 30 rows. The table contains a grid of data points, likely representing a dataset or a series of measurements. The columns are labeled with numerical values, and the rows are labeled with numerical values. The data points are arranged in a regular grid pattern.

The image shows a vertical rectangular area filled with a dense grid of horizontal and vertical lines. This pattern is characteristic of a corrupted or heavily redacted table or document page. The lines are thin and closely spaced, creating a solid black appearance in some areas and a grid pattern in others. No text or data is legible within this region.
